By now, the development has come incredibly close to being finished. After fixing the envelope issue with the tones, all steps in the sequencer are clean with no clipping and proportional to adjusting tempos. After adding new rows, the reorganization of the playStep function completes the solution to my other problem area which was disconnected functions and controls. Now everything is simplified in the code which makes for a wider range of possibilities on the website.